This invention relates to the recovery of oil from the brine, also known as marsh, that is pumped from wells. More specifically, this invention is a system and method for substantially lowering the amount of brine that is pumped to the surface of a well. The pumping of oil from subterranean reservoirs into wells through the use of sucker rod pumps is well known in the art. Many of these pumps draw the oil from an underground reservoir through a well bore and pump it to the surface through the use of a sucker rod. The sucker rod is, in turn, connected to a subsurface pump. The pump, which may be a submerged pump or a rod pump, is used to force the oil through the well. When an oil well reaches the end of its useful life, the well is cover committed
