According to the PRECISE study, one in ten patients suffer from angina pectoris and ischemic heart disease in Spain. Considering that the mortality is virtually inexistent in this group of patients, and that it is possible to treat an ischemic patient non-invasively at a reasonable cost, this study was designed to assess the usefulness of the exercise stress test (EST) in the diagnosis of coronary artery disease (CAD) and in the identification of risk factors in patients who have undergone a EST. A prospective study was carried out on 300 patients who underwent a EST (83% male, 17% female, mean age 48.7 +/- 13 years). Each patient was evaluated by history, physical examination, EST, and coronary arteriography. Each patient was evaluated with the aid of the CAD risk factor score obtained through analysis of the history and risk factors of the patient. A total of 137 subjects had been on medication for arterial hypertension (46%), 42% were smokers, and 37% had a CAD risk factor score of > or = 7 points. We found that 43% of the patients had an abnormal EST, 46.3% of the patients with one or more risk factors had an abnormal EST, and 15% of the patients who had no risk factors had an abnormal EST. Ninety-seven percent of those with an abnormal EST had significant CAD (stenosis > or = 50%) in at least one vessel. In the presence of at least one risk factor, 85.7% of the patients with an abnormal EST and 60.9% of the patients without risk factors had significant CAD. Twenty-four percent of the patients 09e8f5149f

Hepatitis B vaccination of adolescents: knowledge, attitudes, and vaccination rate. The goal of this study was to assess the knowledge, attitudes, and vaccination rate among patients and staff of an adolescent clinic. Seventy-six subjects were surveyed (68 patients and eight staff members). All participants were tested for their knowledge of hepatitis B, their attitudes towards the immunization of adolescents, and their willingness to become vaccinated. Results showed that patients had a better understanding of the disease and of vaccination than staff members. All participants favored immunization of adolescents. The vaccination rate of students in schools within the clinic catchment area was 6.5%. Overall, our data suggest that implementation of hepatitis B vaccination programs in outpatient clinics with a focus on adolescents might not be feasible.

Q: Where is the content of the /etc/X11/xorg.conf file? I've just installed Ubuntu on my new HP pavilion dm4 notebook, and the exact same issue is already present as in this question. My monitor does not work and I can't find any information related to this on the net. Since I'm a novice on Linux, I have no idea where this file is and whether it is possible that this file is having a content. Any ideas? A: Ubuntu 10.04 and later uses a new xorg.conf file. ~$ cat /etc/X11/xorg.conf See man 5 xorg.conf and man 5 XFree86-4 for a copy of the original xorg.conf file. A: If you are on the command line, type man xorg.conf and have a look through the content.
