FROM

SOME_TABLE WHERE id_col = @id; This query has a result set and I want to use this result to construct another query. When I do this, the first query is run and the variable has the value I want it to, but still the first query's result set comes back. The second query is never called since the result set has been used up (and I'm in a loop of running this query over and over). How do I fix this so that I can use the result of the first query in the second query? A: You could use something like DECLARE @id integer SELECT @id = 1 SELECT * FROM (SELECT.... FROM SOME_TABLE WHERE id_col = @id) a if you want to call a sub-query.
