is a shoot 'em up arcade game released by Namco in 1983. It was designed by two former employees of Konami, Yu Suzuki and Ryūtarō Takagi, and released for the Namco System 1 home console which was later ported by Atari to the ColecoVision, ZX Spectrum and Amstrad CPC home computers. The arcade game was ported to the Game Boy, Atari 2600, Nintendo Entertainment System, MSX, Sharp X68000, Game Gear, Sega Genesis and SNES home computers, as well as a Taito arcade game across multiple arcade boards. The Asteroids-like arcade title Star Force II was released in 1984 under the name Star Galaxies, with a completely different soundtrack, and Star Force was later released in 1987. Star Force II: The Galactic Challenge sees Iori Nomura perform the vocals for the game, as voice actor Super Boy, who also voiced Star Fox and Starwing. The game also features voice acting by Masaya Tokugawa, Tatsunoko II, and Akira Kamiya (voice of Solid Snake and Cappy), who was previously involved with the 1987 version Star Force and its 1993 sequel Star Force 2. Star Force II was included in the compilation game Neon Genesis Evangelion: Death & Rebirth for the Nintendo 3DS, PlayStation 3 and Xbox 360. Gameplay The player controls the squadron of fighters in an attempt to protect the giant planet from a massive fleet of attacking UFOs. Instead of being a sequel, Star Force II bears little resemblance to the arcade original. The gameplay is very similar, but with different rules, and is more like a combination of Star Wars and Galaxian. There are asteroids, with shields being able to be destroyed, jet-bikes (Asteroids) and larger ships as standard play. There are some changes in how waves work, where they give the fighter added speed and makes the asteroids slow down, and while the fighters fire towards the center of the screen, all enemy ships do not fire at once, or all ship when their guns cycle up, as is standard in Galaxian. There is a variable speed option where both the players speed can be slowed down or sped up, as well as being able to jump and accelerate. Up to four players can play at the same time via the second-generation Nintendo Game Boy. Two players use the left control pad, and two players use the right control pad. Players can buy missiles and health packs for the
