The game Fortunes and Machines is a unique strategic experience combining a turn-based war simulation with a card game. The French armies invading Italy in the 1490s, led by the charismatic and ambitious Henry VII of England, offer us a great opportunity to compare Henry's military success with the king of France, Charles VIII. In this highly dynamic and historical game, you will command the armies of Henry VII, including his navy, as they enter Italy, marching north along the Italian peninsula. You will lead your armies in attacking enemy positions and controlling fortresses, capturing provinces and raising them to your own side, facing off against enemies and opponents in friendly-only battles. In the process, you will be gaining units and abilities as you earn Victory Points and you can also earn more Victory Points by controlling provinces. As your armies grow in strength, you will be closing in on your strategic targets, which will present you with the opportunity to invade, reconquer, conquer, assault or use the efficient new guerrilla tactics of the Italians. Key Features: An interactive scenario An easy to use interface A dynamic campaign with changing objectives, different factions, new invasion and a turn-based battle system Addictive multiplayer battles A single player challenge mode Gameplay with elements of Trading Card Games A map where each territory represent a different military and economical power A campaign with War Cards that allow new victories conditions. New units and abilities that change the field of play. Up to 4 player multiplayer (2 vs 2) for a fully interactive experience Discover the land of history and fight for the keys of power. Play Fortunes and Machines and experience a whole new kind of strategy game! The Spanish Inquisition has been after her brother and she's going to get revenge. Cape Central's fresh take on great photography A big kid who obviously learned at the feet of his father, Ruth Schrimpf graduated from college back in the 80's at Indiana University. One thing he never quite mastered was his balance so to speak. In fact, now he has gotten into the pro ranks, there are a few things he's still working on. Starting with his photography in the night lighting stages. "I always got a little out of my situation," said Ruth, who, after growing up in the woods of Indiana State began working for Sports Illustrated. "In a photograph, you must create awareness through your eye contact with the viewer and have awareness of trying to capture the moment you're looking for," Ruth continued, "after that, if you've been lucky enough to get the shot, all you have to do is develop the right attitude of confidence and professionalism. That's the philosophy I try to help people adopt as we start an important tournament." Ruth said he has a methodical process that he goes through for each tournament he and his staff play. They start with a meeting prior to arriving on the course for site visits to make sure they understand the day's forecast and what kind of conditions might be expected. Then they'll see if they should bring any clothing for what could be a very cool or very warm day. "In the daytime part of golf, any time you can find a little shade, you're doing yourself a favor," said Ruth. "The area around the USGA's Pebble Beach National Golf Links, for example, is one of the most beautiful places imaginable." Ruth also said when he feels that weather conditions are going to be challenging for his players, he likes to bring in someone from the course during the week or on site with the team. "He comes in so his players can go visit the course so that they are familiar with it," said Ruth. "That's nothing more than having a good relationship with the members on the course." As for the northern part of Minnesota, Ruth said it's likely to be pretty hot. However, the tournament director's department is prepared for whatever they might face. "The more we can prepare the better," said Ruth. HUNTING in PAPER Hunting deer as an outdoorsman seems like it should be difficult to photograph. However, it's the aspect of the game that often interests me.

"Dark Deception is an amazingly well made horror game. The combat is fun, the variety of enemies is superb and the atmosphere is outstanding! The game actually has a good scare factor since I found myself not wanting to turn the lights on. It is a damn good dark scary game! Need I say more?"- Wizardz "Pretty good and very realistic" - Gametraveler.com Story: The citizens of the city of Whitehaven were once plagued with nightmares unlike any before. The people believed it was the work of the cursed Sistine bloodline and demanded they be slain. The few remaining Sistines lived in hiding until the night their family grave was desecrated. The grave where the family was buried, along with the one that held a piece of the Sistine bloodline, was now empty. The monsters attacked the Sistine family that lived in hiding, slaying them all in an instant. The cursed bloodline was brought to Whitehaven and began to spread from those it killed. It's been some time since this plague hit Whitehaven and every day it seems to get stronger. The citizens have nothing, there are no weapons left to fight back. Without the Sistine bloodline to protect them, the citizens have a short time to live. During the night the citizens of Whitehaven dream of Agatha and the Gold Watchers. Each dream is the same but different - the only way to escape the nightmare. The citizens of Whitehaven, not knowing it's the dark, turn on their lights, leaving the Gold Watchers free to kill all who dare to step outside their walls. Game Features: • High quality 3D Graphics with special effects! • Haunting, scary, dark world to survive in! • Fast-paced arcade horror gameplay! • Colorful, vibrant environments! • Zombies, werewolves, spiders and witches in dark mazes! • Dozens of enemies to fight! • Power system, unlock new powers! • Mini-games throughout the game! • Dark humor! Story features: • You are the last of the Sistine bloodline and you must fight the city's nightmares to protect your family's graves. • You must endure two different types of nightmarish landscapes: the Goblin Village and the Gold Watchers' maze. • Face off against three different nightmares: Agatha, Captain Monk and the gold watchers. • Earn XP and unlock new powers as you progress. • Fight three
