FEATURES:..[Fungal peritonitis after digestive hemorrhage]. Peritonitis due to filamentous fungal agents has been reported during recent years, mainly in patients who have undergone abdominal surgery. The authors report here a rare case of fungal peritonitis after digestive hemorrhage in a patient without previous abdominal surgery. Radiological diagnosis was made with computed tomography. The patient was treated with fluconazole. The patient recovered and the infection was resolved.

Fungal peritonitis should be considered in patients with digestive hemorrhage and peritoneal signs. Fever is usually found, and signs of sepsis are identified early. The most frequent complication is relapsing peritonitis. The optimal antifungal treatment has not yet been determined.

Q:
Looking for a web framework that outputs

JavaScript and supports ASP.NET I am looking for a Ruby on Rails or CakePHP framework that will output files such as JavaScript. I want to be able to take my JavaScript files that contain client side logic and have them work on a server. I know that this doesn't seem to make sense, but the client side is only used on the mobile client, so I don
