Ratings Details StarForge is a port of the strategy board game where you will take the role of a race in growth: the Terrans, but in the depths of the galaxy, an old enemy emerges from oblivion: the Goo! They are back and seeks dominance over the entire galaxy. Through the choice of tactics, building ships with gradual improvements and conquering worlds to obtain resources, you must stop the spread of the Goo, protect your home planet and the entire galaxy in the process. Help them, you're their only hope! The game is a very unique port of a strategy board game. You start with a planet with 4 bases. At the beginning of each game, your base will be wiped and the game will start with you in a random location with a random amount of coins. Once you have made a certain number of coins, you will be able to move to a different planet. After that, you will create a ship of that planet to explore space, find resources, and conquer enemies. If you get too many coins, you can buy new ships and upgrades to make the ship even better, or else you can conquer other worlds to get more coins. If you want to use a tactic, you will have to attack the Goo by using various tactics, namely: Dart Bomb: The Dart Bomb acts like an air strike and is effective against enemy units but can damage your own ships as well. Charge Shot: This tactic uses a Charger class ship and fires the target with a fully charged supergun. Galactic Armor: This tactic is the strongest tactic as the ship can withstand enemy fire and is very resistant against Goo units. Dart Bomb and Charge Shot: The combination of these two tactics is called Double Bomb because it also protects the ship against enemy fire. Siege Tank: A Siege Tank is a car equipped with a turret that can fire on other units. In this tactic, you must build other Siege Tanks to protect your planet and your bases. The game can have up to 6 players, and for each of them there will be two factions: Terrans and Goo. There are three different game types, and depending on the type of the game, you can win every time you are outnumbered or with just one or two of your opponents. Contents are the same for all three types of games, except the faction chosen and the percentage of stars added when the Goo takes over. In the normal game, there by Corey: Jadeveon Clowney Going into the 2018 season, Clowney was widely regarded as the best defensive player in college football. In addition to being one of the most highly touted prospects of 2018 and the entire decade, Clowney finished in the top 5 of the Heisman vote, coming in at #5. Unfortunately for Clowney, his program lost the national championship game to Alabama and was narrowly overtaken by Navy in the CFP. In order for Clowney to have an elite resume on the field, he will need to return to his form of 2015 and 2016 and contend on a consistent basis for the national championship and another Heisman Trophy. If he can do that, he will probably be the consensus pick to win the national championship next season. Strengths Collectively, the Hurricanes' defensive line is better at stopping opposing offensive lines than opposing tight ends. The line is able to show high intensity and consistently wear down their opponent, whether it be a training camp practice against their former team, a game, or even the previous week. They appear in every set in practice and consistently put pressure on the opposing quarterback. Clowney especially is a consistently dominant threat at the point of attack, showing qualities consistent with top five talents of the 2018 draft. A failure by the other two DEs is not usually a cause for concern, unless you are the opposing offense. But every year, Clowney makes plays to negate it. It's rare to see games where he doesn't. As a result, if he is healthy throughout the season and practices at a high level each day, you can expect his production to be high from the defensive end position. CeCe Jefferson has been solid through the first half of the season, but is playing as a situational pass rusher rather than a full-time end. This has resulted in his ability to pressure the quarterback being somewhat inconsistent. He's never really been the star he's marketed himself as being, but he's been solid by college standards. His role will continue to be that of a situational pass rusher for a coach in Clemson. His role might change to more of an objective here in a year or two when Jackson, Lynden and Davis all return from injury. When I wrote this breakdown Clowney was still the best player in the country and ranked at #2 on my draft board. I would place him in the top 5 at this point in the season
