be there. I have his
concert phone
number and it's a pretty good sounding phone. (I
imagine it's some
sweet U-MES
goodness.) And I
will surely buy him
a beer (I'm not really going to drink it, but I figure I've earned it). P.S. By the way: I have no idea if we will be able to get in or not. Given that this show is going on a week after my final exams, it's highly unlikely that I'll be able to swing it. If

I'm taking a test,
I'm taking a test.
btw, I wanted to let
all my Brickman
friends know that
tomorrow night's concert (if I'm still hanging around)
will be broadcast
on the GVU
Campus Network.

Trust me, you don't want to miss this one. I've seen it a couple of times (the one in that crazy Pink Squirrel sound system, and the last Brickman concert I went to, where I got soaked), and it's still an incredible show. And the whole thing is done with virtual brass. I believe it. UPDATE:

Early
announcement in the news today. I wonder what it'll be like if I can actually walk in there.

UPDATE: The largest piece of free advertising I have ever witnessed. My friend David sent me this image. It appears that the official press release is out. My bold - and mostly

accurate - guesses
are in red. "School
of Rock teaches a
set of musical instruments as if they are the most important thing in
the world," says
producer and
music producer
Jason Della

Pellegrini about the curriculum, which he began at the University of Michigan in 2004.

"Throughout the song, you are given the tools for masterly improvisation, which can be used in any situation."

That approach,
also known as
"guitar camp" has been embraced by students at higher education

The recent media reports on the case of Farkhad Afshar, the young computer science student found dead on February 25 at his home, point to a worrisome trend where once again freedom of expression, press freedom and intellectual freedom are under attack. Tamin was one of the six journalists who had been recently sentenced to one to four years in prison on charges of spreading propaganda against the Islamic regime. She was a journalist working for the state-run Nida'e-yi Dost (The National Center of News and Information) and had been sentenced on February 22 for a Facebook post criticizing the regime's actions during the protests following the election results. This article was published online as a supplement to EurasiaNet.org on February 28, 2012. Share Tamin Rahmani Tamin Rahmani writes about critical issues in her post of "I am my brother's keeper". She was a journalist working for the state-run Nida'e-yi Dost (The National Center of News and Information) and had been sentenced on February 22 for a Facebook post criticizing the regime's actions during the protests following the election results. For years, journalists and human rights activists have reported a broad crackdown on the media. International organizations have documented that dozens and even hundreds of publications are being closed down. Other regimes on the other hand have applauded the regime's efforts. The authorities in Turkey have directly sponsored the publication of a key pro-regime magazine - Ozgur Politika - which organizes journalist conferences and symposiums aimed at softening the image of
