After being inducted into the International Nintendo Power Hall of Fame and touring the Nintendo booth, we then received our first Nintendo GameCube player controller in its original box. The controller includes the serial number, a booklet containing official product art, the instruction manual, instructions for configuring the player, and the original warranty. The GameCube's controller was already in store in a holder in the Nintendo booth - we were there as soon as it opened at 10am, but just got to check it out after it was turned on - and there were a number of other controllers there. We were also given a small bag of Zelda: Spirit Tracks media, a pack of fake leaves, some Zelda 4-leaf clovers, a mysterious box of cereal, and a Shigeru Miyamoto figure. Turns out the figure is for Jon "Lightning"
