Category:Mathematical software Dave Grohl And His New 'Foo Fighters' Play Is Four Songs Long It seems as though our current culture is fixated on 60-second media. For instance, if you look at the amount of time people spend scrolling through their Facebook feed or Twitter feed on a daily basis, you get a clear picture about the length of your attention span. This idea is represented even in the realm of music. You see bands like 311 posting a single Facebook announcement to announce a new release. With this notion in mind, we have to wonder: is it possible to cram too much into a song? In case you were wondering, Foo Fighters new album "Sonic Highways" is only four songs long. Of course, we've got someone in the band to thank for that. Dave Grohl explained in a recent interview with The Sun that most of the songs from the album were only a few seconds long. He says: "I won't claim to have any magical formula. It's just that the songs end up being shorter. Which is the way they should be." Dave Grohl also goes on to explain that the four-song album is, in a way, better. He says: "I don't think we could create this album any other way. Otherwise, it would be too long. I try to balance what kind of record I want to make. If I do longer songs, there would be more to lose. It's sort of like a sports team. You have a winning recipe that you want to stick to." I am not as naive as I used to be... Somehow I am thinking that it is the 'glass half-empty' part of my personality that's changed over the years. Like the last few months, when I look into the near-future and believe that this is the worst yet - a wake-up call that I am not progressing as fast as I want to, or as fast as I was capable of and successful at, I am probably being delusional. Maybe the glass half-full part is where I draw my optimism? Who knows. This time round, the sudden wavering of my success is actually part of a bigger picture of changes. For instance, I have had my head turned for the last few years by two things. One, the prospect of having a child, and two, accepting the fact that I am too old to do anything with it. The old me would have been scared of it, but somehow its absence has freed me up to accept that there might be a chance that I will never be a mother. I am always crying. It started in nursery school and continued through primary school and even college. I was told to give it up for health reasons. It was only later that I found out that it was the reverse: the crying was a symptom of an acute, incurable form of depression. It was a kind of self-destructive cry for help, (a cry that has been silently screaming 'help me' for a long, long time, but nobody responded, and I lived with the resulting silence and fear. Now, I am simply crying for joy. Crying 'inside out' - both physically and emotionally. The new thing is that instead of holding back all of my tears, I cry them out. I think it is good. Because now the tears are not only a silent outcry, they are also a lubricant, a cleanser, and a way to release emotions that I've been carrying and suppressing for more than a decade.
