Catanduanes. Top News In August, Apple patented what it called a "profiling-based voice recognition system" that could work with a smartphone's touch screen to help with speech transcription, translation, and processing, according to information on the patent filing provided by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. In March, Apple co-founder Steve Wirtz spoke at a technology convention, and the former mayor of Dallas, Ron Kirk, also discussed what he called Apple's "absence of ownership" of Siri. According to an Apple patent application published in early July and filed with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, Apple's predicted continual progression toward a world of human-machine interface could become more pertinent when the user is wearing a headset. In one scenario, the user would be pressing keys on a keyboard to control a program or file, while also talking to the program or file, using their voice. A headset would then be used for the other side of the exchange. Apple has filed a lawsuit claiming that Samsung and another company that was recently acquired by Samsung have infringed on the patent used for Siri
