Puerto Ricans have a reputation for being contrary, for being quick to anger, and for being insular and closed-minded. But many Puerto Ricans do not agree. They are opening up about the island's new reality and their sense of pride, guilt and pain. The maelstrom of emotions has been seen on street corners and, especially, outside of the Coliseum, where the baseball team that symbolizes a resilient nation - the Giants - is playing its last game of the year. "Puerto Rico will always be in my heart," said Jose Contreras as he watched the team drive toward first base in a 3-2 victory over the Oakland Athletics on Tuesday night. "I am going to miss our team. I will always be watching them and I will miss all our San Francisco Giants." Contreras is the father of Jessica Contreras, a 20-year-old nurse who disappeared in July while on vacation in Puerto Rico. The U.S. Army has joined the search, and her parents have promised to do all they can for her safety. "I want to find my daughter because I think this is the most painful thing in my life," said Consuelo Contreras, Jose's wife, who has been sleeping in front of the television for days. "I want to find her so I can hug her." Jose Contreras, a divorced 55-year-old grandfather, said he and his wife will spend the last night of the series in Oakland. But their minds are far away. They will catch their daughter's team, though, and continue to pray. The search for Contreras and her lost daughter is on in Puerto Rico and the United States, and her parents can't let her memory disappear. "I feel guilty because I don't know what my daughter does and I don't know whether she's being taken care of or
