Judge says the shop would be allowed in a residential zoning district, as long as it contains at least one full-service bar. (Photo: courtesy of Hemp Grocery Store ) Today a federal judge ruled that the operation of the retail shop called Hemp Grocery Store could proceed pending full legal review. The shop currently offers an array of goods aimed at keeping a careful eye on the rest of the world's hemp-based products. It sounds like a normal retail store to me. Seattle's Capitol Hill neighborhood is already the home of the wellknown Hemp Kitchen. "Cannabidiol, or CBD, is the non-psychoactive compound found in the cannabis plant," Hemp Grocery Store's website declares. "It is used in over-the-counter products such as OTC pain and muscle relief, skin care, eye care, anti-seizure medications, sleep aids, and stress relievers. In addition, CBD can be used by food and drug manufacturers to market products in a cannabis free environment." Judge Thomas Zilly of the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Washington issued the order today. He found that the Hemp Grocery Store, which is located at 1603 E. Madison St., falls within the same commercial/retail zoning district as the Hemp Kitchen, which is located at 1605 E. Madison St. The shop's lawyer said today that it could open for business as soon as next month. "The District granted the Special Use Permit," the judge wrote in the opinion, "based on the advice of the Department of Planning and Community Development that the Special Use Permit should be granted." The D.P.C.D. approved the Hemp Grocery Store's Special Use Permit in December. "After the Special Use Permit was approved by the District, D.P.C.D. revoked the previous Special Use Permit for Hemp Kitchen," the judge noted. The Hemp
