[The effects of gabapentin on withdrawal syndrome after smoking cessation]. Smoking is a significant contributor to public health in Brazil. Recently, the treatment of smokers with varenicline, a non-nicotine antagonist, has been approved for the treatment of tobacco dependence. Thus, the objective of this study was to evaluate the efficacy of gabapentin (an anticonvulsant that reduces the negative effects of nicotine withdrawal) in helping smokers to stop smoking. Of 115 smokers, 31 received varenicline, whereas 84 participated in a controlled clinical trial. All patients received a double-blind, randomized study with 30 minutes of pharmacological treatment (one teaspoon of gabapentin 400 mg dissolved in water with food, at bedtime) or placebo, after which they received two sessions of smoking cessation. The results showed that the gabapentin treatment group had a lower rate of withdrawal symptoms (p=0.017), a lower withdrawal intensity (p=0.005) and craving (p=0.001) compared to the placebo group. However, there were no differences in the number of attempts to stop smoking. This study demonstrated the efficacy of gabapentin for the treatment of nicotine withdrawal syndrome.package org.hisp.dhis.optiongroup; /*
