That is why I use Photoshop, not because it's cheap."—Terry White, Big Eye Productions "I think that Photoshop is very good because it's like Word, Excel, and PowerPoint. It's really good for customizing a lot of different graphics. It's not the most beginner-friendly, but it's one of the most powerful programs in the world. I mean, it's not super expensive—there are cheaper products out there that have the same features that are certainly more beginner-friendly, but, you know, if you're willing to put the time and effort into the tools, you can do some really cool stuff."—Jason A. Bell, Cool Graphic Masters "It's a pretty powerful program. It has tons of different features. One of the things that people don't really understand about digital art programs is that Photoshop is powerful enough to make your art."—Brandon Bird, Shutterstock "Photoshop is the most powerful image manipulation program available. For commercial works it's essential. All the great designers use it; it's a definite must."—Jane Shepard, Marvel Comics "Adobe Photoshop CS5 is the program I use for almost everything. I definitely recommend it for anyone with a Mac or PC. It has the best color engine of any photo editor."—Jeffrey Gerstein, Fluid Motion Media

That's right: the Bronies — effeminate, pink-haired fantasy-anime aficionados — have taken a stand against the people who think rainbows and unicorns are confined to two little kids who make long ponytail wigs out of cotton and colored yarn. A group called the BronyCon Convention, held this week in Baltimore, Maryland, protested the U.S. Internal Revenue Service (IRS)'s stated intention to revoke tax-exempt status for non-profit groups whose stated purpose is to promote "social welfare" under the Section 501(c)(3) of the U.S. tax code. (IRS rules do not differentiate between "charities" that are primarily educational or scientific and "social welfare" groups that support social issues or public advocacy.) As reported by The New Civil Rights Movement, BronyCon — which was expected to be a large event with between 1,000 and 2,000 attendees — was cancelled by its organizers due to the government's plans to revoke "social welfare" status from the group and open it to IRS scrutiny. According to a New Civil Rights Movement report, the group's "tweet about cancellation reads, in part: 'After our new tax status is revoked, our future as a 501(c)(3) based group will be gone, which means the event WILL BE CANCELLED, due to IT IS THE ONLY WAY FOR US TO KEEP OUR TAX-EXEMPT STATUS.'" The IRS is expected to release its decision on "social welfare" status for 501(c)(3) tax-exempt groups by Jan. 16, 2014. This is the second time in recent history the IRS has tried to revoke the tax-exempt status for a group. After the IRS sent a letter to the Catholic Church for about $12.6 million in "erroneous" payments in tithe-like payments from one of the church's dioceses in the late 1990s, the church sued the government. After the church won the lawsuit, an agreement was reached in 2002. The IRS agreed to pay back all the taxes it had wrongfully claimed and the church agreed to stop operating as a tax-exempt 501(c)(3). But with the IRS's latest move against the Bronies' non-
