“Protect your land” In the name of protecting the environment, wealthy landowners in several states have successfully blocked attempts by local governments to create more open spaces. The cases raise a disturbing question: Is the true goal of protecting nature preserving private property? In Pennsylvania last year, conservation groups sued the state for allowing development on land owned by, among others, Chester County’s Edgar S. Grosvenor Jr. and the son-in-law of the late billionaire John M. Archbold. The plaintiffs argued that the Grosvenors and their neighbors blocked a
