Extract the compressed file to a new folder. If the Drivers.zip file contains multiple.bin files, extract the.ZIP file to the same folder. In some cases, some of the bin files in the file may not extract properly. That is ok, because you need only the one that is the one with your device model number. Now, double-click the.bin file. The file will begin to install. A pop-up will indicate the progress. During the installation, your computer will restart. Once the installation is complete, the pop-up will automatically close and your screen should show the wireless LED change color. Once the wireless LED change color, you need to turn on the Cisco Air P121ag A K9 Windows 7 Driver and go through the wireless setup process in the video below. Now run the Download Utility again and install the drivers. I noticed that this time I was not prompted to insert a USB. Then once the process is complete the Voice & Video Utility was run. Upon completion, close the Voice & Video Utility.
