in cultures transfected with the pcmv5 empty vector, the expression of cadherin-11 does not result in a clumping or degeneration of cells (nor in an increase in cell death). it is possible that l1cam expression is not relevant under conditions in which cells are only weakly attached to each other. they do not change the distribution or overall number of cells in the culture. the transfected cells do move much faster than the untransfected cells, and tend to slide over the holes in the surface. at a distance from the growing cell front, they do not form cell aggregates. a common molecular event associated with apoptosis is caspase activation. the caspase family is a group of cysteine proteases that are typically activated during apoptosis by two ways: (1) external stimuli, e.g. the tumor necrosis factor- $\frac{1}{2}$  receptor/ligand superfamily, and (2) direct cell stress such as oxidative stress, dna damage, etc. using caspase-3 as the marker for apoptosis, the present study shows that the number of cells stained positive for the activated caspase-3 in the transfected cells is higher than in untransfected cells. one of the things we decided to keep from the previous style of interface was the start button. rather than make the whole ui bigger and clunkier, we decided to keep the original start button that most users are used to. that said, having always heard the rfactor 2 community say that rfactor 2 has a cluttered look, we thought we would combine the start button with a window to your car menu; because, after all, rfactor 2 is a simulator. enter the rest of the rfactor 2 world at the new racing arena page which gives you all the info, tools and resources you need for the virtual track of your choice. give the racing arena a go, enjoy it - and if you have any suggestions or ideas to improve it, let us know on the forums.
