I have tried several methods and have gotten a different amount of improvement in each one. For example, the last time I cleaned the head via the LCD touch display, the printer head stayed clean for six weeks. However, cleaning via the CPU works for only two weeks. I removed all the ink cartridges and cleaned the head via the LCD touch. There are 12 marks to clean for the middle third of the MK channel. In the middle third of the MK channel 2 is clean and 10 is slightly dirty. In the upper and lower thirds, it's 10 - 12 clean. In the ink cleanup program, there are three options: adjustment program Epson Tx700 Option 1: use the CPU (CPU_manual) Use the CPU mode in the adjustment program to remove the ink blocks on the MK head. This option is designed to clear approximately 95 percent of the ink channels. Epson states that you can remove 99 percent of the ink from the MK head. With this mode, you must use six cartridges. To clear more than the recommended 95 percent of the MK channels, you must use more cartridges.

yes they are. i have tried to find them on-line and elsewhere but no one (including an epon repair facility) seems to be aware they exist. the cleaning carts would be nice to have to use with the tubes cleaning function, maybe you guys should look into producing some. i will try to see if i can find some new ones and will post a reply if i can find them. for the moment, i have been using the cartridges available on the printer lcd and i have been totally happy with them. lol, go back through the previous posts in this thread and you will see my wic reset and tubes cleaning processes. i have now had more than 30 cartridges. i have upgraded the print heads. i have done three tubes cleans and now trying to restore what was lost in the print heads. i am on the sixth of at least 12 tube cleans. just an fyi for you and the forum readers -option one (section 2.3, cleaning in the adjustment program) sounds and lasts just about the same as the powerful cleaning available from the lcd display on the printer so i have just been using the one available on the printer lcd for cleaning. option three (section 3.6, tubes cleaning of the adjustment program), unfortunately, does not work with the carts from inkjet mall. i get a message from the adjustment program that the cleaning carts are empty. i guess you need special epon cleaning carts to use this function. i have tried to find them on-line and elsewhere but no one (including an epon repair facility) seems to be aware they exist. the cleaning carts would be nice to have to use with the tubes cleaning function, maybe you guys should look into producing some
