Clamp Paint is a powerful tool for "paint over" of an image. It is based on various image processing techniques, such as thresholding, contour tracking, and region filling. It is powerful enough to be used for a variety of different purposes, such as selecting the parts of a photo that you want to keep and use as a template for a new photo, replacing a picture, removing unwanted objects from photos, cleaning up messy pictures, as well as for painting, framing, and printing. The program is available for Windows, Mac, and Linux. The interface is divided into a number of tabs. At the bottom of the window, there is a detailed description of all the functions available in the program. In addition to this information, Clamp Paint comes with a user manual. The program is fairly easy to get the hang of, but it does require some time to learn how to use the program effectively. However, you can always get help from the built-in help file. Once installed, it is simple to use the program. Simply select the photo or any other source image to process and then select the type of output you wish to have. When you first open the program, it will ask if you want to perform a basic cleanup of the image. Just keep on clicking until the initial cutout is done. The program will also trim your image, if it detects any cutouts that are smaller than the image it is working on. Cutout Clamp Paint can cut out the unwanted parts of an image. You can select a frame, a line, a polygon, or any other shape to cut out unwanted areas of a photo. Once selected, you can use the polygon slider to adjust the corners and sides of the frame, or use the vertices slider to control the number of vertices. Basic cutout Clamp Paint is perfect for cutting out the unwanted areas of a photo. You can use any frame, line, polygon, or ellipse as a guide. Basic cutout Once you are satisfied with the frame, you can select "Set as" and set the cutout as a pattern to be used as a template for a new photo. You can then use the polygon slider to adjust the frame.
