Located between the northeastern states of Odisha and Sikkim, the Indian state of Tripura has a humid tropical climate that features heavy rains and thick foliage. Like much of the region, the state's geography is defined by rivers flowing south and rising in the Himalayas to flow across the north toward the Bay of Bengal. Three major rivers, the Tista, the Dharia and the Manas form the boundary between the state and the neighbouring states of India, Bangladesh and Bhutan, respectively. The Tripura State Assembly has 35 seats, and it has a state legislature in addition to a bicameral government. The state also has a 16-
