Diabetes- and caffeine-induced changes in the behavioral pharmacology of cocaine: an overview. Cocaine's stimulatory and rewarding effects are potentiated in animals made hyperglycemic and/or by increasing caffeine intake. Mechanisms underlying these effects are incompletely understood, but appear to involve combinations of pharmacological effects on dopaminergic, serotonergic, and noradrenergic neurons and their receptors. Results from behavioral studies examining interactions between cocaine and drugs that alter the dynamics of blood glucose are summarized. Because most hyperglycemia-induced cocaine responses appear to involve a combination of pharmacological effects, perhaps, with an as yet undefined endpoint, the author has focused on the consequences of consuming caffeine in conjunction with cocaine. A large literature examining caffeine-cocaine interactions has been reviewed. The effects of caffeine on cocaine-induced stereotypy and locomotion are particularly well studied and serve as the basis for discussions of interactions between caffeine and cocaine. Cocaine lowers brain caffeine levels and this effect alone or in combination with the concurrent effects of caffeine on noradrenergic transmission increases the locomotor stimulant properties of cocaine. However, little information is available on caffeine's effects on cocaine's psychomotor stimulant properties in drug-naive animals. Caffeine's effects on cocaine's behavioral pharmacology are consistent with the co-administration of cocaine and caffeine; however, available data are limited and contradictory. Thus, in the presence of caffeine, cocaine does not attenuate the rewarding and discriminative effects of acute cocaine. Among the 49 Federal judges in the U.S. Circuit Courts of Appeals appointed by U.S. Chief Judge Merrick Garland in 2015, 57 percent of the Judges at the Circuit Courts have received at least one communication of hostility against him because he was President Obama's nominee for the Supreme Court. 5 of the 8 Judges at the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit have received at least one communication of hostility from a judge at the other Judge's court because he was nominated to the Supreme Court by Obama. 1 of 4 Circuit Judges who decided 9-0 to deny the petition to the Supreme Court to review the constitutionality of the travel ban has received communications from judges
